Weeks and Mellon Are Subpoenaed to Appear in Daugherty Inquiry

Other High Officials Under Fire—Weeks to Be Questioned About Bribe, Mellon Regarding Liquor Withdrawals

WASHINGTON, March 18—Investigation of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty took another sensational turn today when it was announced by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, that subpoenas have been issued for two members of President Coolidge's cabinet—Secretary of War John W. Weeks and Secretary of Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon.

The committee is understood to want to question Weeks concerning the Standard Aircraft Case, in which Gaston B. Means, has testified he received $100,000 in thousand dollar bills from a "mysterious jap" and turned the money over to Jesse W. Smith.

Mellon is to be questioned, it is said, concerning liquor withdrawal permits, Means having testified last week that he investigated the secretary of the treasury for President Harding and "got him."

The committee today started to dig deeper into the alleged conspiracy to transport and exhibit the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films, calling William A. Orr, former secretary to Gov. Whitman of New York, as the first witness. Orr testified he owned 20 per cent of the picture rights.

The committee at the same time, announced it had also subpoenaed Major Roy Haynes, chief of the prohibition unit, David Blair, head of the internal revenue bureau, H. H. Votaw, brother-in-law of the late president Harding and superintendent of federal prisons; Elmer Dover former assistant treasury and three special assistant attorneys general, John W. H. Crim, Henry W. Anderson and Adna R. Johnston, Jr.

Other subpoenas were issued for Arthur Robb, chief files clerk in the department of justice; Alfred R. Urion and Henry K. Urion, Washington attorneys; Arthur Sixsmith, treasury department official and James A. Finch, pardon clerk in the department of justice.

WASHINGTON, March 18—With charges of corruption already trailed into the department of justice the Wheeler-Brookhart committee plunged ahead today in its investigation of an alleged nationwide conspiracy to broadcast the show-

FULL HOUSE IN MAYOR'S COURT

Eleven Arrested in Poker Raid are Arraigned, Pay Their Fines

Nearly $100, in fines and costs, was collected from the eleven men, arrested for gambling Saturday night in the "Dove Nest" over the Mona cafateria, Hickory-st, following the hearings before Mayor Harry B. Heaton Monday evening. Each of the eleven pleaded guilty, paid his fine and was released.

The fine assessed Ed Quinlan was slightly larger than the others. It is charged he permitted the young men to play poker for money, in his rooms on Hickory-st. He was fined $10 and costs—$13.60; the others $5 and costs—$8.60.

Those arrested are: Sydney Jones, Harry Doney, George Buckless, Orlie Gross, Charles McKrea, Elwood Murphy, Ed Quinlan, William Roberts, Brooks Johnson, Russell Cross and Ed Wells.

When the game was raided, Doney and Wills were not playing. They were charged with frequenting gambling resorts.

Each was given a word of warning by Mayor Heaton. The mayor said that because the game appeared to have been a sociable affair with very little money involved $2 was taken by the officers at the time of the raid) the fines were comparatively small. However, he warned, a second offense will mean a larger penalty.

HONOR ST. PATRICK AT ROTARY MEET

The Coshocton Rotary club held its regular meeting at the Park hotel. Tuesday noon, with good attendance.

A St. Patrick's day program was carried out.

T. J. Hanley gave a talk on the lives of General James Shields and Dr. James Walsh, two famous Irish-Americans. In a vein of Irish humor Mr. Hanley eulogized the activities of these two Irishmen, referring to Shields as the fighting type of Irishman, and to Walsh as the student-political type.

Frank Jones, accompanied by Carl Siegrist on the piano, sang a group of Irish songs appropriate to the occasion.

Jack Hammill had as his guests and introduced two winners of prizes in the bird-house building contest recently conducted by the local Boy Scout club. Seventy-three houses were made by the boys of the local organization, and the winners were William Hoehnes and Wayne Lawrence.

Attorney Warner Pomerene spoke briefly on the seriousness of the lack of funds available for the adequate upkeep of the Carnegie library, the Coshocton city hospital, and the carrying out of the Coshocton-co good roads program.

Attention was also called to the lack of men at present in the Federal Reserve corps, and to the probable danger in permitting American military forces to become weakened.

At the close of the meeting President Louis Glover announced the next regular meeting date of the local club for Tuesday evening, March 25, at the Park hotel. This, he said, will be ladies' night.

Opponents Unable to Muster Enough Votes to Offset "Gag" Rule

PAIR SHOWN CITY'S GATE

Massillon Bootlegger and Companion Take to Heels Following Tirade

H. S. Friend, one of the three Massillon men arrested here last Friday night for booze running, upon returning to the mayor's office Monday afternoon for his receipt for the $500 fine he paid Saturday night, came very near getting locked up again.

Accompanying Friend was a stranger. The two men engaged for a moment in a friendly conversation with Mayor Harry Heaton. All went well until apparently without reason the stranger began to curse the late President Harding and other presidents and to denounce the American form of government in general.

Mayor Heaton slammed down the cover of his desk and loudly informed the two men that if they did not "get out of town as fast as their legs or an automobile would carry them," they would be put where they would cause no trouble.

They left.

Friend's Buick car had been left, stored in the Buick garage, Walnut and Seventh-sts. Mayor Heaton, upon going to the garage shortly afterward with an officer, learned that the men had been there, had taken their car and left in a hurry.

The plaintiff asks a divorce and that the defendant be enjoined from disposing of any of his property. She also asks for temporary alimony, and that at the final hearing of this cause she be granted permanent alimony.

T. H. Wheeler represents the plaintiff.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Defying President Coolidge and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the house of representatives this afternoon passed the new soldiers' bonus bill and sent it along to the senate.

Only forty minutes were permitted for debate on the bill before the final vote was taken, but in that short time the measure was upheld by ex-service men in the house as the "best adjusted compensation legislation that had been presented to congress," and attacked by friends of the administration on the ground that "tax reduction was more important now than the bonus."

By A. O. HAYWARD.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Described by its opponents as a "tombstone bonus" because a soldier must die to get his money or wait 20 years for the maturity of his insurance policy, the new soldiers' bonus bill was taken up by the house today, under a rule which assured its passage during the afternoon.

Sixty congressmen were counted this morning in opposition to the bill as reported by the ways and means committee. They are against the legislation on principle and because they fear the effect on nations finances.

President Coolidge has declared himself against a bonus.

The adoption of the "gag rule" for the consideration of the bonus requires the consent of two-thirds of the members present to pass the bill. Indications pointed to an attendance of approximately 400 when the vote is taken and about 135 votes would be necessary to block the passage.

The opposition cannot muster half that number.

Only 20 minutes were allowed to each side for debate on the bill before a vote, altho this cloture can be abandoned by unanimous consent. The "gag rule" permits no changes in the legislation by way of amendment and it must be defeated or passed as it stands.

There has been some complaint against the house leaders for taking up the bonus under suspension rules. The leaders do not want the bill thrown open to changes. Some congressmen wanted to change it to make it optional with the former soldier beneficiary to take insurance or cash. They claimed that 75 per cent of the soldiers preferred cash.

Administration leaders, asserted, on the other hand, that veto of the bill by President Coolidge was certain should it provide for a heavy cash drain on the treasury, while there was some chance of the president approving the insurance policy plan.

Coshocton Named Tuscarawas by Early Settlers

Another phase of Coshocton-co history has been receved thru a manuscript on "The Origin of the City of Coshocton" prepared by Mrs. Zelia Hardesty, Franklin-tp teacher, for the purpose of providing information by which the Coshocton city and county teachers' historical class may be aided in putting on the dramatization of Coshocton-co history, to be given in a few weeks.

According to Mrs. Hardesty's manuscript, Coshocton is built upon the site of the old Indian village, Goschachgunk, which, according to the Rev. John Heckwelder, missionary to the Moravians, was called Goshocking by the English.

The Indian dwellings were built in cabin form, not in the usual wigwam style. The village extended from the river to Third-st, the principal street being what is now Secor-st of Coshocton. The cabins stood close together in two long rows, which formed the street. The remains of the fireplaces, which were built at the north end of the cabin, could be easily seen by the first white settlers. The village was burned by Colonel Daniel Broadhead in 1781.

The town of Coshocton was laid out in April 1802 by John Matthews and Ebenezer Buckingham, Jr. In making their survey these men were assisted by Gibson Rook, who was given two town lots for his services. The town was christened Tuscarawas. In 1811 it became the county seat and the legislature changed the name to Coshocton.

Charles Williams is supposed to have been the first settler of Coshocton. In 1801 he and Isaac Hoagland moved their families from Virginia to the site of the future town. They erected a temporary abode on a vacant lot below the present Tuscarawas bridge, where there was a fine sugar camp. This house, the first erected in Coshocton, was built of buckeye logs, was 12 feet square, and for a few weeks was occupied by both families. During this year Williams built a log cabin near the northeast corner of Water and Chestnut-sts and moved his family into it. On February 11, 1809 this house burned, two children, one of Charles Williams and one of his brother James, losing their lives. All of the household goods was destroyed. The same year, however, Matthews and Buckingham, de-

DELANEY EMERGES FROM OBSCURITY TO SUDDEN FAME

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, March 17—By the grace of chance and a right cross that landed flush on the jaw, Jack Delaney, legitimate middleweight has arrived overnight from the obscurity of the agate line to the fame of bold face caps. Jack supplied the right cross but he was fortune's plaything so far as chances was concerned.

Last week he was a character in his own home town, Bridgeport, Conn. Today the boys on Broadway, N' Yawk, Powell st, San Francisco, State-st, Chicago, and Spring st, Los Angeles, are mouthing the name with a knowing air and claiming an intimate acquaintance. The right cross did that.

It found a spot on Paul Berlenbach's chin and that much advertised young man was knocked clear out of his shoes. Delaney has stepped into them. He will meet Jackie Clark in Newark tonight in place of the discredited Berlenbach, who lost the contract when he lost the Delaney encounter.

Enter chance. But for that capricious factor, Delaney would still be playing the small time and getting small money. A bit more than a week ago he was all but signed to meet one Larry Estridge at the Commonwealth Club here on Saturday last. The bout was to follow the Johnny Dundee-Pal Moran affair at the garden and meant absolutely nothing, least of all to Delaney, who would have done well to get $1,000 for his efforts, if any. Moran, however, injured his hand in training and Tex Rickard decided to replace his attraction with a Berlenbach bout.

Two men were selected as possible opponents, namely Augie Ratner, a harmless veteran and Delaney. The latter immediately dropped all thots of Estridge and fate conspired that he should be chosen to face the knockout king. The rest is history.

It was history that might have been written months later and in a radically different vein. Had Delaney caught Berlenbach as late as six months from now it is not inconceivable that the outcome of the meeting might have been reversed.

DAUGHERTY HEARINGS ARE RESUMED BY COMMITTEE

BY WM. K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON, March 17—The "public trial" of Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty was resumed today with the Brookhart-Wheeler committee turning its searchlight of publicity upon allegations of graft by high government officials.

With new sensations looming, the committee sought additional evidence on two subjects—

1—An alleged conspiracy to show the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films thruout the nation in violence of law, thru the "fixing" of the department of justice, "by money or influence" and

2—The alleged payment of a $100,000 bribe by a Japanese to the late Jesse Smith, friend and confident of the attorney general to quash a war fraud case against the Standard Aircraft corporation, for which Mitsu and Co., a Japanese firm, was the financial agent.

While witnesses were announced by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, acting prosecutor, there was the possibility that another "surprise" witness would take the stand when the hearing started. The committee to date has closely guarded the identity of every star witness changing its plans without a moment's notice.

Subpoenas were issued for G. O. Holdridge, former department of justice agent, Will Orr, a friend of the late Jesse Smith and Tex Rickard, New York fight promoter in its efforts to learn more of the alleged film conspiracy. Indications were the committee would also subpoena Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight champion, and his manager, Jack Kearns. Other subpoenas were for "Jap" Muma, Cincinnati newspaperman and Ike Martin, Cincinnati amusement promoter named as participants in the film deal by F. C. Quinby, part owner of the fight pictures who testified Saturday.

The alleged $100,000 Japanese bribe, already denied by Mitsu and Co., will be thoroly investigated, Wheeler said.

tion before the bureau that proceeds will pay the fine many times," the letter adds.

"Prior to the letter the pictures had been exhibited in Albany and other cities in New York and thruout the country, Holdridge said.

"Spellacy said Muma told him the whole story of the transportation of the fight films and all the details of the conspiracy. Later Muma confirmed the story directly to me," he added.

"Were all these statements reported to Burns?"

"No, because of the peculiarity of the statements."

"What was that?"

"Because they charged the attorney general to be the head of the conspiracy and that Burns stood in with the conspirators."

"Why didn't you report to Burns?" demanded Senator Jones.

"I wanted to check up on Muma's story. He had said Burns was a part of the conspiracy and I wanted to find out about this first."

Holdridge said the plan as outlined by Muma required "definite understandings with United States district attorneys or assistant district attorneys."

"Tell us what Muma said about getting 'goats' in each state."

"Muma said he had to have a 'goat' in each state and that they would also have to know what would happen to the 'goat'," Holdridge added.

"You mean they would have to know what the fine would be?"

"Yes. Muma said that it was also necessary to get a line on the judge in each judicial district where the picture was to be shown, so that they would know whether there was any danger of a prison sentence," Holdridge continued.

Burns told Muma, Holdridge said that he had never heard of the letter directing department agents to investigate the alleged film conspiracy.

$100,000,000 Loan to Faance Is Discussed—Bankers Willing, Government May Approve

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Far undoubtedly will be made. The more significant than appears on loan would have to be floated by the surface is the willingness of private bankers, too, and again the American bankers to lend France United States government will $100,000,000 and the readiness of have an opportunity indirectly to the United States government to aprove. The government has approve the proposal indirectly. legal right to object to any loans

The government takes no responsibility for any loans made by private bankers to foreign governments or any domestic enterprise however worthy the motive but there does exist an informal understanding between the bankers and the department of state that no loans will be made without giving the government here an opportunity to interpose an objection This policy was adopted in order to prevent American funds from being used to support armies and navies abroad and as a means of diverting money to reconstruction and commercial needs only.

Since that policy was announced no large loans have been made to any of the allied powers except Japan who needed the money for reconstruction following the earthquake. Loans to smaller countries have been negotiated but the loan to France is the since President Harding and Secretary Hughes asked the bankers to submit their loans to the government for examination before being made.

The lending of $100,000,000 to France is not in itself a large transaction as loans have been reckoned in the past but being made at this time when the experts are finishing their reports on reparations and the German budget, it has a far-reaching importance.

J. P. Morgan & Co. acted as fiscal agents for the British government before America entered the war and floated a large loan for France since the war. Thru their French banking connections they are kept in close touch with affairs in Paris and they do not make a loan of $100,000,00 without assuring themselves about the future of France's finances. The loan itself is an evidence of confidence and just now there can be no confidence in the future of anything in Europe unless French policy toward reparations is thoroly defined. There are reports that the Morgan interests were assured that the recommendations to be made by the commission of exports headed by Charles G. Dawes will be accepted by France. It will be recalled that J. P. Morgan himself, sat as an adviser to the reparations commission two years ago and that the present effort to compose the financial situation in Europe is directly in line with the advice he gave at the time.

by private bankers but the weight of its disaproval is a moral factor which few bankers would care to incur.

Broadly speaking, the impression one gets here especially since the Morgan loan was announced is that European affairs at last are on the mend and that important developments may be looked for in the next several months which may have their reflex in increased purchases of American farm products and manufactured goods because as the fiscal situation is improved, foreign currencies will have a greater purchasing power.

If the Dawes report is accepted —and it looks as if it will be—for officials of the government here are optimistic the next step will be to provide a loan for Germany. Out of that loan some advances in reparation payments to the allies

Warren to Leave Thursday for Mexico—Hopes to Bring About Better Relations

WASHINGTON, March 17—The departure of Charles B. Warren, newly named American ambassador to Mexico, for his post next Thursday after conferences which began today with President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes will mark the beginning of an important era in the relations between the United States and Mexico.

In some respects the months that lie immediately ahead are more vital to the future of Mexico than any period since the fall of Diaz in 1911. The presidential elections will be held on July 6, to choose a successor to President Obregon who under the constitution is ineligible for re-election. The charge that the Obregon administration was trying to foist General Calles on the electorate led to the recent outbreak of revolution under Adolfo de la Huerta, another presidential candidate. This revolt has been fairly well subdued, due to some extent to the promptness with which the Washington government sold munitions to the Mexican government and arranged for the passage of Mexican troops thru American territory so as to reach otherwise inaccessible parts of Mexico.

Having recognized the Obregon government, the United States did not wish to see it dissolved when the export of munitions and the display of real moral support might be the means of discouraging not only the De La Huerta rebels but prospective revolutionists.

In the last few weeks it has become apparent that the Obregon forces were gaining the upper hand. The reconstruction of the country has been delayed by revolution and now the opportunity comes once more to Mexico to begin the mending process. Satisfactory adjustment has been made of the long drawn out oil controversy as well as the matter of claims.

The Mexican government has ratified both the treaties negotiated by Mr. Warren when he was special commissioner together with John Barton Payne last summer. Now as the machinery of claims tribunals is about to be put into operation, the American government considers itself fortunate that Mr. Warren was persuaded to go to Mexico City as ambassador and take up the work of cementing the relations between the two countries.

Also, European governments have claims and controversies and the exercise by the United States of its good offices will on the one hand prevent friction between Europe and Mexico but will also prevent undue interference by European elements in the internal affairs of Mexico. Only today dispatches from Mexico charge some British oil men with having supported the De La Huerta revolt. The United States has always taken the position that since Mexico was such a near neighbor the friendly influence of the American government could be sought either by Mexico or the European governments in composing differences between the Mexicans and the governments across the Atlantic.

Mr. Warren won the confidence of President Obregon last summer and it was due to the tact and diplomacy of the American commissioner that the negotiations culminated in formal recognition and the ratifications of the two treaties. Mr. Warren therefore goes to Mexico with a background of familiarity with the Mexican problem and personal association with the influential men in Mexico. All of which is counted upon by the American government to bring about better relations and, of course, the development of an era of orderly reconstruction so that trade and commerce may be improved and that the Mexicans themselves may be able at last to realize their true destiny in the western hemisphere.

An occasional dose of DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN Keeps young girls fit

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now. Mrs. Mary Kellar of 132 Benton St., Sisterville, W. Va., was perplexed about her daughter until her own druggist told her they used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at his house, and she did likewise. Miss Irene Marierska of 90 Peter St., Buffalo, N. Y., is glad her attention was called to Syrup Pepsin.

Safe for Young and Old

Let mothers with growing daughters interest themselves in this matter and see that their judgment is enforced. A rule followed by many is to take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin once a week until the bowels function daily, and at such other times as there is headache, biliousness, sores and fever blisters, lack of energy and appetite, sleeplessness, indigestion.

A dose can be given in these conditions to any member of the family however young or old as Syrup Pepsin is a simple compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasing aromatics, and perfectly safe.

Public Recognizes Merit

You will quickly see the difference between a mild laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and castor oil, or rough cathartics and physics. Syrup Pepsin acts gently and does not gripe. Increased doses are not necessary. A bottle can be had at any drug store, and a spoonful costs less than a cent. It has been successfully used for thirty years and is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles having been sold in drug stores last year. Keep Syrup Pepsin in your medicine chest.

How does your market get its meat?

Day in and day out, the retail shop has the cuts of meat that you desire. The service is so regular that people take it for granted.

How the meat got there is an interesting story that you will like to read.

Back of your retailer is a large organization. This organization buys the live stock offered by the producers, transforms it into clean, wholesome meat, and then distributes the meat to thousands of retailers in cities, towns, and villages all over the country.

But how?

Larger cities have Swift & Company branch houses, which always have a supply of fresh and cured meats in their coolers.

The smaller cities and towns receive regular supplies from refrigerator cars shipped direct from plants.

The story of these direct shipments is interesting.

Swift & Company's 1924 Year Book tells this story on page 33 and also gives many other interesting facts about the packing industry. A copy is yours, free, if you will send for it.

Sixth St. Theatre

One of the most interesting of the theatrical events scheduled for Friday March 21, at the 6th St. Theatre will be the record-breaking New York success, "The First Year."

In this clever comedy, Frank Craven, the author has kept away entirely from the beaten track of characterization that in the great majority of plays about married life, is supposed to represent the re-action of husband and wife toward each other. In "The First Year", the characters are human first and entertaining afterwards. Also, he has reproduced the little troubles of little people—the sort of people whom George Ade and Booth Tarkington and Zona Gale have made famous in literature, but whom the drama persistently neglects. And it is the little things of which "The First Year" is made up that strike a spontaneous chord in the breast of almost everyone.

wonderful glory again in the free motion I used to have when my days were younger. I look at my hands and think of the twists and swellings they used to have. I bend way over to the floor. I haven't been able to do that in many years. I can thank S. S. S. for it all! To me it was a rising sun of joy and liberty. Brothers and sisters in misery, do not close your eyes and think that health, free motion and strength are gone from you forever! It is not so. It is here and now for all of you. S. S. S. is waiting to help you." There is a reason why S. S. S. will help you. When you increase the number of your red blood-cells, the entire system undergoes a tremendous change. Everything depends on blood-strength. Blood which is minus sufficient red-cells leads to a long list of troubles. Rheumatism is one of them. S. S. S. is the great blood-cleanser, blood-builder, system strengthener, nerve invigorator. It stops skin eruptions, too, pimples, blackheads, acne, boils, eczema. It builds up run-down, tired men and women, beautifies complexions, makes the flesh firmer. Start S. S. S. today. It is sold at all good drug stores. The larger size is more economical.

EXPERT GIVES MORE TIPS TO BUILDERS OF SUPERDYNE

One Stage of Audio Frequency Necessary for Proper Operation.

By CARLTON E. BUTLER, Radio Engineer.

After you have constructed the superdyne receiver you may encounter some difficulty in obtaining the best results. This may be due to the way in which you have constructed some of the units or to the manner in which the wiring of the set is arranged.

For best results a stage of audio frequency amplification is really necessary. When using the detector alone there seems to be a disturbing feed-back of energy from the phone cords and your body to the radio frequency part of the circuit that greatly interferes with tuning.

The diagram given shows one stage of radio, detector, and one stage of audio frequency amplification. This is quite sufficient for headphone operation, but for loud-speaker reception at least two stages of audio frequency amplification will be found necessary to bring in distant stations.

If the detector tube has a tendency to choke up when resonance is reached it is an indication that the tube you are using for a detector is too hard. If the tube does not readily come back to normal try changing the capacity of the grid condenser or try placing a grid leak across the grid terminal of the socket and the positive filament lead. Two or three megohms will be satisfactory for the average tube and none will be needed for the soft detector tube.

Considerable difficulty seems to be experienced with the radio frequency part of this receiver. The tickler or rotor of the variocoupler must contain exactly the correct number of turns to make the circuit function better than the ordinary regenerative tuner.

The function of the tickler is to prevent the tube from oscillating when it is turned fully in one direction, to allow it to oscillate freely when turned full in the other direction, and to allow the tube to oscillate occasionally when the coil is halfway between.

RAP COOLIDGE FOR KEEPING DAUGHERTY

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Partisan criticism of President Coolidge for "keeping Attorney General Daugherty" in the cabinet, flared up in the senate this afternoon.

Senator Caraway, Democrat, of Arkansas charged the president with being afraid to dismiss Daugherty "because the attorney general is said to wield considerable influence and a new election is approaching."

EAT NO SWEETS IF YOU ARE RHEUMATIC

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat no sweets for awhile, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and above all, drink lots of water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid or body waste matter, and is often generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this toxic acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste, and stimulate the kidneys, thus helping to rid the blood of these rheumatic poisons.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

Try This Way To Get Relief From Head Colds

Nothing to Swallow—You Just Melt a Little in a Spoon and Breathe in the Healing Vapors.

To stop a head cold, try this simple, direct method. Melt a little Vicks in a spoon and inhale the penetrating Vapors of Camphor, Menthol, Eucalyptus, Juniper Tar, etc. Also put a little up each nostril and snuff well back.

Another method is to heat a tin cup, put in a teaspoonful of Vicks and inhale the vapors that way. As fast as the vapors lose their strength, throw out the melted Vicks and add fresh.

Mothers prefer Vicks for their children because it avoids so much internal dosing. It can be used with perfect safety on the youngest child.

termined to make a permanent settlement, erected a log house somewhere between the river bank and "central house," at the corner of Second and Main-sts.

It was about this time that Dr. Increase Matthews, from Muskingum-co, visited Coshocton and was invited by his brother John to build a mill on Mill Creek. Dr. Matthews speaks in historical records of having seen his brother John, Stephen Buckingham Ebenezer Buckingham, Jr., and a sister of the Buckinghams, living together This settlement was abandoned in 1802 the Buckinghams removing from the county on account of the presence of malaria.

The Buckingham place was later purchased and occupied by William Scritchfield in 1801 William Whitten, a blacksmith, and afterwards the first justice of peace, settled here and lived in a cabin a little back of the William Burns residence on Second-st. Calvin Babbit also built a cabin north of this on lot 219. In a short time George McCullough and Thomas Evans moved here McCullough married a daughter of Scritchfield and lived in the Buckingham house This was perhaps the first wedding in Coshocton co. Thomas Evans was a shoemaker and had his shop on Second st.

In 1808 Andrew Lybarger a tanner came, and lived on the corner of Second and Walnut-sts In 1809 and 1810 Abraham Wiscarver and James Calder settled here. Wiscarver was a hatter, and Calder was a merchant and exhibited his goods at 214 Second-st Colonel Williams in the meantime had kept on hands a stock of goods which he traded to the Indians for peltry.

In 1811 Captain Neff, a tailor, came, and followed his trade here for many years. Owing to the unhealthful climate there were but four families living here in 1811. What is now Main-st was then covered with hazel brush.

In 1811 Dr. Samuel Lee, the first resident physician, settled in Coshocton. The same year Wright Warner and Aaron Church, the first two resident lawyers, came. Church received his education in an eastern college and was admitted to the bar.

About 1815 the town began to settle more rapidly. In this year John Crowley, a carpenter, who was afterwards sheriff of the county, came from Maryland. James Renfrew, Sr., also came in 1815, as did William and Alexander McGowan, who, with their mother, came from New Jersey. Their father was killed on the journey here by the accidental upsetting of the wagon. Mrs. McGowan died in 1816, and the boys were for a number of years proprietors of the hotel at the corner of Second and Main-sts.

Abraham Sells came from Marietta in 1814 He was justice of peace for some time, and latter coroner of the county.

In 1820 the population of Coshocton was 120.

BETTY'S PEEK INTO JAPAN.

MY, how Betty did fuss and fret when her mama called her to come and wash the kitchen windows. Gocomeback, the wee travel elfin, found her on the verge of tears.

"I don't care," she pouted. "I just wish I lived in a house without any windows. If there's one thing I despise doing, it's washing windows."

"Gracious!" laughed the elfin, snapping his funny fingers. "In a jiffy I can fix you up just right. There are no doors or windows in the house I have in mind."

Before Betty could ask any question, she found herself standing with Gocomeback in front of a queer little house surrounded with cherry blossoms.

"Well, of all things," she laughed. "I do believe we're in Japan. Are we, Gocomeback?"

"Certainly. We are in the land of cherry blossoms," replied the elfin, rapping gently on the panel in the very centre of the queer-looking house.

"Is that the house without windows?" Betty whispered.

"You're right, there are no windows in this house," replied the elfin. "Yoseeta, my little Japanese friend who lives here, hasn't any windows or doors to wash. I do hope she's at home." And Gocomeback rapped once more.

Without a sound of any sort, the great panels of the house slid back and there stood a wee little Japanese girl in the prettiest of bright red kimonos.

"She Isn't Cross with Us."

She clenched both her tiny hands together and shook them at Gocomeback. Betty thought this looked very funny.

"No, she isn't cross with us," laughed Gocomeback, noticing the queer expression on Betty's face. "That's Yoseeta's way of shaking hands."

The home of Yoseeta was made of wood and roofed with black tile. There wasn't a window in the place and the only door was the opening made by Yoseeta when she pushed the paneled wall back. This opening left the whole house, from the front to the back, wide open to the street.

"Yoseeta, this is Betty from North America," said Gocomeback, when the wee little Japanese girl came out to meet them. "She thought she would like a house like yours without any windows. She doesn't like to wash windows."

"Oh, but how nice it must be to sit at a window and watch the crowds go by," said Yoseeta. "I wouldn't mind washing windows if I could do that. Here, when our panels are closed, I cannot see the cherry blossoms or the people passing by. I'll change houses with you if you wish."

Betty looked at the queer little paneled house and decided that she would rather not make the change. Like a flash of lightning, she found herself standing in her own yard.

Without a word, Betty picked up her pan of water and before she knew it the windows were washed bright and clean.

Why Wild Surmises Flashed Through Madge's Brain.

THE wildest possible surmises flashed through my brain as the department manager of the children's outfitting store accosted me by name and asked me to step aside with her. While I occasionally had shopped in the store, yet I was not a familiar enough figure there for anyone to know my name. I always had made cash purchases and carried them home, and I was sure that my identity was known to no one. Yet the woman's demeanor confirmed my earlier fantastic suspicion that in some manner she had known beforehand of my necessary hurried shopping trip.

Surely the detective on the trail of the Harrison children could not have found out my plans! If he had—I felt my respect for the apparently clumsy and stupid man rise dizzily. The prospect of getting the children out of the country without interference from their father's family appeared suddenly to be a very slender one.

Mechanically I followed the woman to a partially secluded nook near the window. There she turned with a smile to which I forced an answering perfunctory one.

"You'll be surprised to know, Mrs. Graham, that we've been watching for you for hours," she began, and I saw that she was rather dramatically enjoying the task of astonishing me.

"I don't understand that," I replied, "for no one but myself, and two or three other people who I know are not in the city to-day, are aware that I meant to go shopping. And no one but myself knows that I came here."

The Good Guesser.

I knew, of course, that this last statement was not strictly the truth. Alfred Durkee knew where I was, but unless things had gone terribly wrong, he was busily engaged on the other side of the city in trying to get steamer passage for Dr. and Mrs. Braithwaite and the Harrison children.

"You have a friend who is a good guesser," the department head replied. "She came into the store a few hours ago, and said you would no doubt be in some time to-day for just such emergency shopping for children going on a sea voyage as you have just completed. She asked me to have the saleswomen watch for you and said that you were to be asked to wait for her, and under no circumstances to leave the store until she came back. I believe she intended going to some of the other stores to hunt for you."

I stared at the woman in amazement, then the thought of Bess Dean flashed into my mind in wild fantastic surmise. Could Alfred have told her—I almost laughed aloud at my own folly as I remembered that when Alfred left his office—and Bess—he knew nothing of my errand to the city save that I needed his aid.

Mrs. Bird—Harriet—could something have happened which required my immediate presence? Had one of them followed me to the city? This seemed to be the most plausible explanation, yet there were absolutely no grounds for believing that the mysterious woman was either of the two.

What should I do? That was the question which stood out before me with maddening indecision. Should I obey this mysterious request and remain at the store, knowing that if I did so I should miss keeping the appointment I had made with Alfred Durkee and Mrs. Bird's driver and on the time of which I had so strenuously insisted?

The Interruption.

And then the realization of my own silent-minded silliness swept over me. Surely my wits had gone woolgathering. I turned to the woman smiling at me.

"Did my friend give her name?" I asked.

"Oh, yes!" she said. "She told me to tell you that——"

"Mrs. Baird!" The courteous voice of a stocky, well-dressed man, evidently some one of high authority in the store, interrupted us. There was a peremptory note in the well-modulated tones which Mrs. Baird evidently recognized, for she turned away from me instantly with a murmured "Pardon me a minute," and following his beckoning finger stepped away from me a few paces and stood listening respectfully to some instruction, which he was giving her, which obviously concerned some detail of the establishment's business.

I had hard work to keep from striding after her and demanding the name which her superior officer's interruption had left unuttered. But I rigidly curbed my impatience, contenting myself with ostentatiously consulting my wrist watch, hoping that she would take the hint, and ask permission to come back to me.

But long before her colloquy was ended, a familiar voice sounded behind me and I whirled to confront Lillian Underwood.

YOUR HEALTH

Since It Stimulates Heart Try Always to Be Happy

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONCE when President Monroe was an old man he had occasion to take part in a social function given in his honor. When some one suggested he must be tired out, he replied: "A little flattery will support a man through a great fatigue."

That was a gracious and tactful reply, but it is more than this. It is the statement of a great psychological and physiological truth.

Why does a doctor prescribe a stimulant? It is to give the whip to a flagging heart. It matters not what drug is given, whether it is strychnine, alcohol, aromatic spirits or something else. The purpose is to excite the heart to more energetic action.

But there are other ways to stimulate the heart than by the giving of drugs. Happiness, joy, enthusiasm, excitement, pleasurable emotions—all of these are almost as stimulating as wine or powerful drugs.

When the heart flags then comes fatigue. A tired feeling and weak heart action are frequently associated. It happens often that the greater the fatigue, the weaker the pulse.

If a tired person, with flagging heart and weak pulse, is given an appropriate dose of a heart stimulant there is almost immediate response. The pulsations grow stronger and the blood is sent in a more powerful stream to every part of the body and brain.

What happens then? The feeling of fatigue grows less and, for the time, it may disappear entirely. There develops a sense of physical well being.

But to accomplish this it is not necessary to give wine or a drug, because, as Mr. Monroe so aptly said, "a little flattery will support a man through a great fatigue." The pleasing words of a flattering tongue may excite the heart, set the pulse to beating and remove the symptoms of fatigue.

The mind has a recognized control over the bodily functions. It is not a mysterious matter either. Mind and brain are so interlocked than when the mind is aroused the brain sends its message to every part of the body, including the heart. This impulse may excite the heart to fuller action, or it may abate and retard its movements.

Kind words are like medicine. They stimulate the functions and thus make it easier to bear the burdens of life. Let us bear this in mind in all the contacts of our daily work. By so doing we will add to it the sum total of good health and vigor.

WINIFRED BLACK LAUGHS ABOUT Those Heavy English Meals

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

MR. GILBERT CHESTERTON, critic, story teller and man of the world, arises in London on a nice foggy morning, has a cup of cold tea and a slice of cold English toast and a boiled egg served in the shell and says to a listening world that "breakfasts as breakfasts" are unknown in the United States of America.

"Fruit eaters are no more intelligent than beef eaters," says Mr. Chesterton. "Americans should not raise the subject of breakfast in the presence of Englishmen. They sleep in hot houses and when they awake they are so thirsty that they have to devour quantities of fresh fruit.

Wishing for a Different Breakfast

And so he raves on and on with Bernard Shaw sicking him on—all because our nice little Peggy O'Neil, who happens to be playing in London, dared to whisper sadly that she did wish she could get something a little different for breakfast once in a while—"a bit of fruit" for instance, or "some nice muffins and a cup of real good coffee."

Anyone who has ever lived in England for even a week will know just how Peggy felt about it.

English breakfast tea—tasting like hay newly plucked from the barnyard loft. Toast in a rack—getting colder every minute—and a boiled egg. That's the English idea of a perfect breakfast, three hundred and sixty-five times a year. Oh, yes, and a rasher of bacon, limp and half done.

That's what you get in every well-to-do, middle-class home in England. The only thing that worries me is why dear Peggy stopped at breakfast.

Why didn't she speak a wistful word or so about dinner, too? Boiled mutton, under done; roast beef that's good, we'll have to admit so; soggy boiled potatoes, Brussels sprouts—oh, the soggy misery of them, day in and day out, with maybe a turnip or so for variety—and a pudding. Good puddings, there's no getting away from that.

But vegetables, oysters, fish, crabs, clams, mussels, lobsters, salads, real soup, real gravy, hot biscuits, popovers, Sally Lunns, cornbread waffles, buckwheat cakes, why they never heard of any of these things for either breakfast, luncheon, dinner, tea or supper.

They eat five meals a day in England and all four of them practically the same thing day in and day out, year after year.

Peaches, apricots, melons, pineapples—nobody even dreams of eating these things in England except the multi-millionaires, and they don't dream of it unless they have visited America or married an American and acquired the habit. No wonder any sort of decent fruit is worth its weight in gold in England. I've seen a London hostess pay nearly five dollars for a pineapple. It is quite customary there to hire a pineapple for great occasions, set it in the middle of the fruit dish and let all the guests have the fun of looking at it. The first time I went to a smart dinner in London and they passed me a bunch of grapes, I took it and nearly gave the lady at the head of the table heart failure.

I found afterward that I was expected to take a pair of scissors from the butler and cut myself two or three grapes as a sample.

Fruit—they don't know what it is. Salad—you have to go to France for that. Vegetables—Brussels sprouts, carrots, turnips, potatoes, cabbage, and you've said it for the average English household.

Things Only the Rich People Eat

Oh, yes, they have gooseberries, and in the season, wonderful strawberries, very large and sweet, but nobody eats them except rich people or those who live in the country and have their own vines. They never saw a real blackberry or a real, luscious, red raspberry in all their lives, poor things. And as for oranges and grapefruit and apples, they are to hang on the Christmas trees or serve with the Christmas dinner.

Poor Peggy O'Neil, I don't wonder she's hungry. Well, some day she'll come home in an English mackintosh with an English swagger stick in her hands and talk to us about London. I hope she'll have a good American breakfast of grapefruit and ham and eggs and popovers and a pot of coffee with real cream and some fresh butter and four crisp waffles and some American maple sugar to top off.

And if she survives that, here's luck to her and plenty of good American money to buy plenty of good American food for the rest of her life.

Just then Madame's most expert fitter sent word that she was ready for Miss Miller.

"Do come along if you have a minute," she urged. "I want you to see the voile that Madame designed especially for me."

I went gladly, for I'm always interested in the clothes our clients are choosing.

Miss Miller soon stood before me in one of the most delicate blue and white voiles it has been my pleasure to see for a long time.

"Don't you love it?" she asked, enthusiastically.

"It is too lovely for words," I declared. "I must examine it more closely."

HEROINES OF HISTORY

Significant Incidents in the Lives of Famous Women

By MARK STUYVESANT

The Woman Who Braved the Hardships of the Camp.

AMONG the first of the Society of Friends to be "read out of meeting" on account of their sympathy with the Colonies and their intent to take up arms for the cause of Independence against Great Britain was of Clement Biddle.

Immediately this early patriot decided to give up all—for he lived in comfort and luxury with his family in Philadelphia—and cast his lot with the Continental Army.

Immediately his splendid wife—Rebecca Biddle—sacrificed the peace and protection of the well-ordered household over which she presided, deserted the pleasant life of her native city and went directly to the camp where her husband was an officer.

The Army of Washington, with which Mrs. Biddle's husband was serving with the rank of colonel, was encamped on the Brandywine. Here she worked with many other good women who had made the same sacrifice.

An interesting anecdote is told of a stirring day when a British foraging party was within a few miles of the camp. An order was given for the ladies to leave camp. But Mrs. Biddle waited for an opportunity to speak with the commander-in-chief, General Washington, when she begged to be allowed to remain and continue her work.

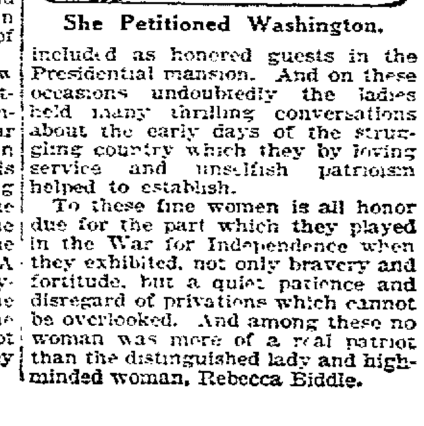

Immediately she sent out her servant to procure all the food that could be found in the neighborhood. In the meantime the British had lost heart and hearing that the Americans were on their track hastily retreated. About a hundred weary officers and men returned that night. Mrs. Biddle met them at the outposts and invited them to dinner as her guests.

This is only one of the many instances when such women as Rebecca Biddle worked shoulder to shoulder with their men, aiding them by practical work of the camp and encouraging them in what then seemed a hopeless fight for right and independence.

It was during this period that Colonel and Mrs. Biddle formed a lasting friendship with Lafayette, who was, on his last visit to Philadelphia, Mrs. Biddle's guest at her home.

And it was during these stirring times and amidst the most trying hardships such as the Winter at Valley Forge that Colonel and Mrs. Biddle became the close friends of General and Mrs. Washington.

In the after years of peace, when Washington served as President, Colonel and Mrs. Biddle were always included as honored guests in the Presidential mansion. And on these occasions undoubtedly the ladies held many thrilling conversations about the early days of the struggling country which they by loving service and unselfish patriotism helped to establish.

To these fine women is all honor due for the part which they played in the War for Independence when they exhibited, not only bravery and fortitude, but a quiet patience and disregard of privations which cannot be overlooked. And among these no woman was more of a real patriot than the distinguished lady and high-minded woman, Rebecca Biddle.

Some Imported Prints for the Linen Closet.

THE needs of the American women's linen closet require [illegible] from all over the world. When one market is cut off another steps right in and takes its place. Those of us who missed for a time the excellent linens of Germany grew better acquainted with those of Belgium, Bohemia, Spain, Italy and other countries. We even consented to have a space on our shelves for Japanese silks and Chinese, Persian and Indian prints.

The new Chinese prints are fascinating. Table squares with doilies to match in white and cream [illegible] most attractive colored [illegible] borders are now being sold in a number of the stores. The borders [illegible] flowers like roses, [illegible] sprays of wisteria and cherry blossoms, in natural colors that are fast and washable. Besides the square set there are some [illegible] round and oblong shapes. The round sets look, at first glance, like the painted oilcloth sets, for they have narrow borders of solid color around the edges.

Bedspreads of Persian cotton prints are most attractive and are to be purchased at reasonable prices. Though the ground is white, the colors are as softly blended in the design as in a camelshair shawl—they come in all-over patterns with distinctive borders. Many designs are in the familiar palm leaf pattern. The bedspread wear and wash well. They are finished with knotted fringe one inch wide as so many of the foreign linens are. They are long enough to cover both bed and pillows and wide enough to fall deeply on either side of the bed.

Spain sends us some table sets in natural-colored linen, rather fine in quality, and embroidered in gay colors. These may be too gay for many people's taste, yet attractive for they are unusual.

There is quite a colony of little Russians, as they are called, who are doing their native work in America: Latvians, Esthonians, Lithuanians and Ukranians, all contributing their native designs and handiwork. No wonder it is a colorful period in the history of our linen possessions. Besides all the foreign linens there are some charming things coming from a colony in Michigan. The table runners and sets are in natural linen with hemstitched hems finished with a cord stitch and French knots in self color, the end of each cord line being finished with a little tassel. The sets are very pretty used with colorful china and the new brilliantly-colored glassware.

One of the new fashions may be followed in cutting over old tablecloths that have become worn at the edges as they eventually do. The perfect center is trimmed out and a colored linen hem is added. The border of the cloth is cut into napkins that are finished to match. Appliques may be cut out of the colored linen and designed on top of the cloth.

Before we go forth to buy new linens, which we are apt to do in early Spring during the flutter of the Easter white sales, we should carefully sort our stock, repair and cut over old linens. We can then buy with care and understanding of our real needs.

If we have need of many new sheets it is better to buy the sheeting and hem them by hand, or hemstitch them ourselves. They wear better and we may buy them in just the weight we prefer. It is economy to buy the sheets long enough to turn over well at the top, and to tuck well under the mattress, for they then keep the mattress and the blankets clean. A short sheet is an abomination anyway, especially for tall people. The length adds to the price of the ready-made sheets but does not mean much extra outlay when they are made at home.

Muzzling The Press

DOWN in the sister republic of Brazil they have just enacted and are about to experiment with a press muzzling law. Brazil has perhaps copied the American war timess idea of the United States under the grotesque, rotten Palmer-Burleson regime, when papers and magazines, wholly without warrant of law and on the most trivial excuses, were barred from the mails under the infamous sedition and espionage acts.

The Brazil "idea" provides fines and imprisonment for editors on a graduated scale for "attacks" on public officials. Already one defiant editor has been haled into court and others equally outspoken and "radical" are shortly expecting arrest. Just how long and how far the people of Brazil will stand for these new press muzzling statutes remains to be seen. Our guess is that the reaction against this latest manifestation of despotism and bureaucracy will not be long in coming.

There is a tendency among the official bureaucrats in all countries to construe criticism of public officials and their acts as an "attack" on the government. There is no question that the "best minds" in this country, such as Fall, Denby, Daugherty, Palmer, Lodge, Burleson and their ilk would not be slow in putting across statutes similar to those just enacted in Brazil if they thot the people would stand for an abridgment of the ancient rights of the press. Men of this stamp, always 100 percent pure in their patriotism and devotion to their own conception of American ideals, would welcome nothing so unreservedly as a legal muffler for those newspapers and magazines which are quick to scent official corruption and to expose it to the purifying rays of public opinion.

"Statesmen" in the above category are always prompt to discover their own patriotism and the treason that lurks in every newspaper office. But they never seem to understand that the average editor is animated with a love of country quite as exalted as theirs and that the average newspaper is quite as public-spirited as the average legislature and presidential cabinet. Burke said, in one of his famous debates: "Up yonder, (pointing to the press gallery in Parliament) sits a fourth estate greater than all the rest," meaning that the liberties of the British empire were quite as safe with a free press as with a free legislative assembly.

Indeed, it has been the genius of the English speaking races to confide liberty more to a free press than to any governmental agency yet created. It may be left for Brazil to teach the world that a muzzled press makes for popular liberty rather than a press free to investigate, to criticize and to talk straight from the shoulder to would-be tyrants. But as for America and Great Britain, we believe public opinion still acknowledges the supremacy of a free press and unrestricted publicity as the greatest preservers of hard won liberties yet devised by the wit of man.

"Ford's Chicken-Feed Offer"

BY ALL odds the ablest of the editorial comment opposing the grant by Congress of the Muscle Shoals water power right to Henry Ford was that appearing Saturday in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. While not expressing unconditional opposition to the hundred-year lease to Ford, the St. Louis paper does oppose and advances cogent reasons for its opposition to the lease in the form voted for by Congress.

This great industrial concession to Mr. Ford was embodied in the McKenzie bill and it passed the House by a vote of almost two-to-one. This editorial is printed under the caption, "Ford's Chicken-Feed Offer." As a criticism of the action of Congress in accepting the Ford offer it contains much food for serious reflection, especially concerning the future possibilities of the grant, and it is reprinted herewith in part:

"The adjective, so-called, is advisedly applied to this ridiculous offer. Ford is tendering a chicken-feed consideration for a principality. He is buying a kingdom for a song. True, the stipulated purchase price is $5,000,000, but 'the sum of $1 in hand paid' would be about as reasonable a proposition from the standpoint of fair exchange. Incidentally, it is a good guess that if Ford had offered a dollar the House would have accepted it.

"It is not Ford's offer of $5,000,000 that the House approved. It is the Ford reputation, the popular belief in the man's fairness and industrial wizardry.

"The action of the House, let it be admitted, is a remarkable tribute to Ford, tho its political flavor is noticeable. It is a gesture to the farmers, who are almost unanimously in favor of letting Ford have Muscle Shoals. This attitude of the farmer is not all sentiment. There is a practical strain in it. The farmers want cheap fertilizer. They believe they will get it if Ford gets Muscle Shoals. They have far more confidence in him than they have in any other interest capable financially of undertaking the project.

"The farmers may be right about this. Just the same, Mr. Ford has not contracted to produce fetrilizer in this offer. In his original proposition there was nothing binding about fertilizer production. The McKenzie bill purports to remedy that defect. But the provision regarding fertilizer is so qualified, in the judgment of the minority report of the Committee on Military Affairs which was in charge of the bill, as to furnish Ford a loophole if he finds he cannot meet the farmers' expectation. In this connection the minority report recalls a statement Ford made to the Secretary of War in the early negotiations, which was that if he could not manufacture fertilizer profitably he would quit. It also cites the judgment of experts that the plan Ford has in mind for making fertilizer — that is, nitrates — is commercially impracticable and [illegible].

"B[illegible] as the fertilizer guarantee is, [illegible] detail. [illegible] under [illegible] The property the Government is turn[illegible] stories $8[illegible] Ford [illegible] $5,000,000 [illegible] a constr[illegible] ment [illegible] lent to the [illegible] plant [illegible] What [illegible] Gov[illegible] $1,000,000 [illegible] value [illegible] $17,000,000. The [illegible] the proposal is [illegible] by the fact [illegible] very [illegible] ment the Government has an offer of $1,500,000 [illegible] cash for a single unit of the plant. It also has a better offer for the whole property on the basis of a 50-year lease.

"Preposterous as the price is, however, and unsatisfactory as is the supposed guarantee as to cheap fertilizer, the real objections to the Ford proposition are found in its amazing terms. Those terms were searchingly analyzed by Representative Burton of Ohio, one of the most accomplished men in our public life, who has never been associated with predatory interests, who is a true, enlightened liberal and who speaks with authority on the subject of water power.

"Under the terms, Mr. Burton showed, Henry Ford practically becomes the fee holder of this great property. All the regulations of the Federal power act of 1920, which embodies the wisdom of the best thot and experience of our statesmen on this vital issue are waived. In effect, the Federal power act is repealed. The Government forfeits all its essential rights of supervision and direction as to operation, use, issuance of securities and participation in profits. It places in the hands of Henry Ford a wealth of water power vastly greater than is controlled by any corporation in the country.

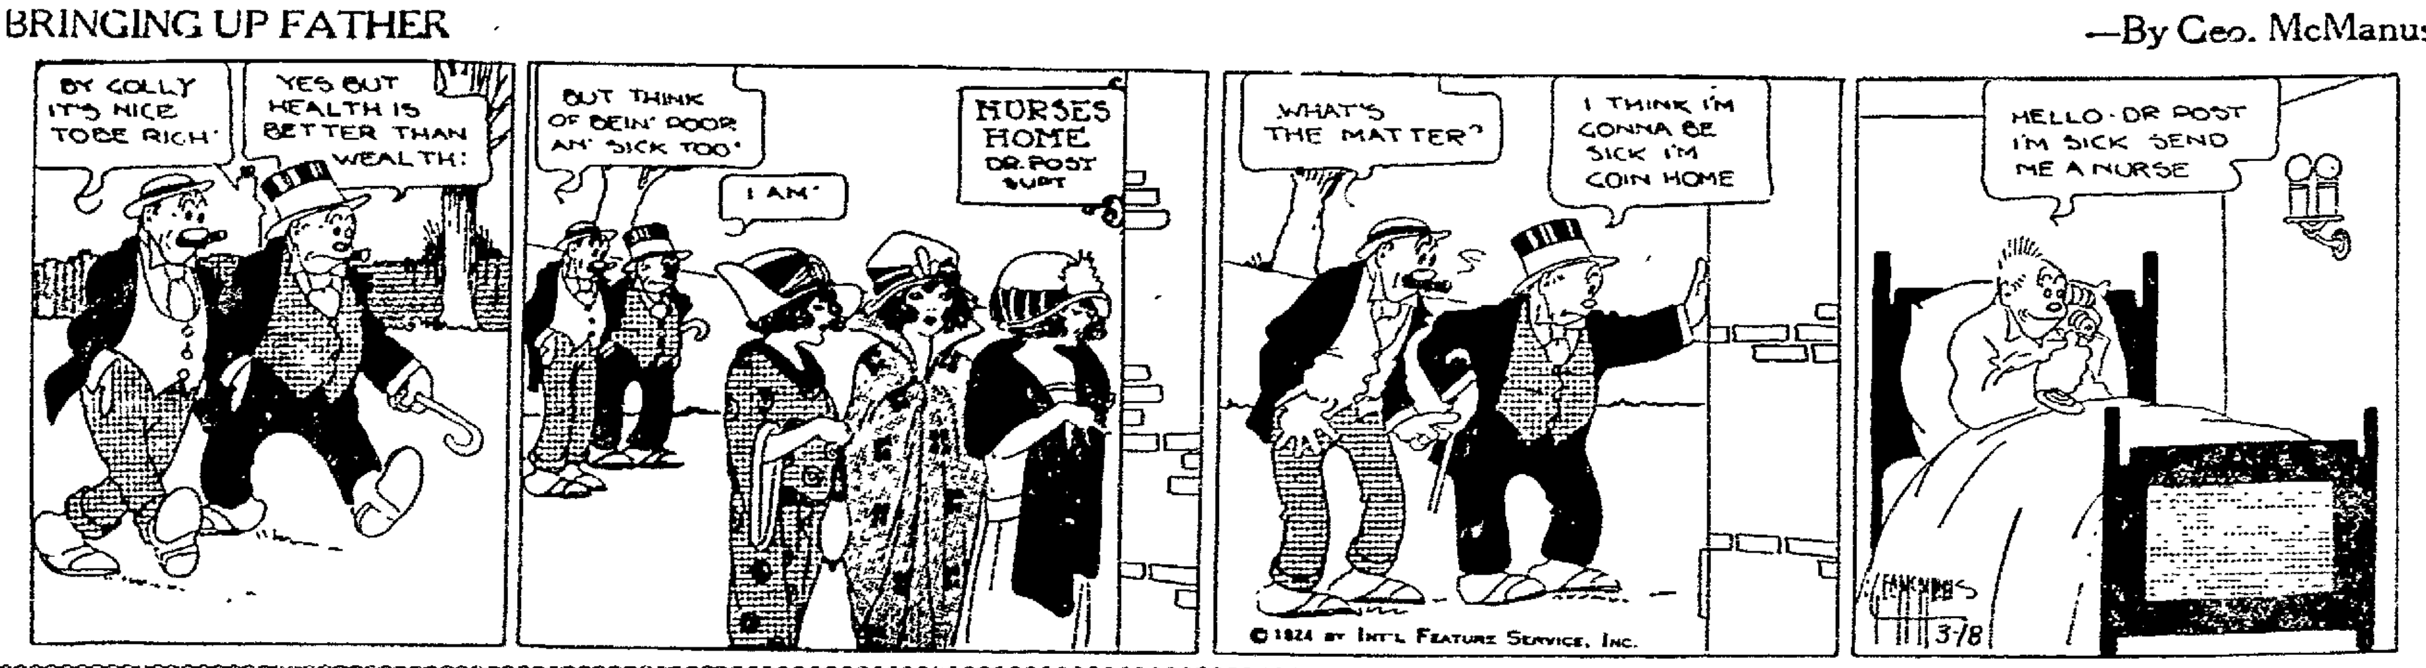

"True, Mr. Ford may develop and distribute this water power as a public utility and for the public benefit, but that is optional with him, and by the ruthless conditions drawn up by himself, he is privileged, if it suits him, to use the property in his own enterprises for his own enrichment. Should he elect to do that Mr. Ford could crush out any competition and become, by the seal and deed of the United States Government, the monopolist in his present manufacturing field. Further, the tenure of his proprietorship is fixed at 100 years, with preferential right for renewal, which is directly in violation of the Federal power act's limitation of 50 years as to the life of a water-power lease, with no preferred renewal rights.

"The Post-Dispatch believes the Ford offer for Muscle Shoals should be rewritten to comply with the requirements of the Federal power act, which are designed to safeguard the public interest and conserve the great natural resource of water power for the public. What Henry Ford's purpose may be in this stupendous adventure we don't know. But granting his intentions to be most honorable, conceding his inspiration to be a dream of unparalleled public service, the fact is Henry Ford will be dead and buried while this lease is still young, and who shall say that his successors will inherit his genius or his supposititious philanthropy!

"If Henry Ford wants to play fair with the public in the future at Muscle Shoals, let him play fair with the public now. He can do that by making a fair trade with the Government now."

New York Day-by-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Mar. 18—Down in Chatham Square after dusk there is a gathering of the offscourings of a Bowery world. They represent New York's economic barden—men who have perhaps tried and failed and become chronic drifters.

Their problem is to grub for enough money to keep them comfortably mellow with "Bowery smoke"—the illicit hooch that sells for 15 cents a swig. The hawkers carry the bottles on their hips and uncork them in doorways for customers.

Chatham Square is hard by Chinatown. From the square the narrow twisting streets of Mott, Pell and Doyers lead to the underground passages where shuffling figures move about in the phantasmagoria of opium.

There has been a sting to winter for the down and out chips washed upon the Bowery sands. There are no saloon back room "flops" any more and with municipal lodging houses filled they must walk the streets or shiver in hallways.

Chatham Square is one spot where the police do not resort to the keep moving order for pedestrians. So the tatterdemalions cluster together like sheep and build bonfires along the curb. They also make the hobo's piece de resistance—Mulligan stew in tin cans.

Here are many men who once lived respectably but thru drink or bad luck became wondering members of the submerged tenth. The Bowery has many doctors, lawyers, and other professional men who have been hopelessly beaten by life.

They will beg but few are thieves. Work has long since become distasteful. The Bowery claims them because it is the one place where no one inquires about the past. It is the place where men forget.

A subway observer has discovered men are more vain than women. The men primp more before slot machine mirrors than women do. He took count of 109 that appeared before a mirror in the Times Square station. Seventy three were men.

The taxi starter in front of one of the smartest New York hotels pays $75 a month for the privilege of holding down his job with a tax cab company. He depends solely upon tips and makes about $100 a week above the amount he pays for his concession.

Education is certainly grand. One day the New York newspapers printed stories with pictures of a former Harvard boy prodigy who was making $23 a week and the next day they showed pictures of Jack Dempsey in his $10,000 roadster.

The most expensive couvert gouge in the history of this frivolous little [illegible] is now being exacted by a place in the fashionable Fifties that sets the patron back $12. The hostess lives down stairs and the room devoted to midnight suppering is on the top floor—three flights up—to which patrons must walk. There are only 10 tables, the three piece orchestra is indifferent and the dance floor is just about large enough for five couples. The lure is that the hostess will only admit those who are socially important. As a result all of that strata are eager to be there on display. It gives them a certain standing.

Harlem and the Bronx where there is almost a radio to each family are disturbed about the tenant's radio rights. Building superintendents are complaining that sleep is becoming impossible due to the incessant noise from radios. And yet they know that a family will move rather than be deprived of the radio.

WALT MASON

THE MORNING AFTER

I met a scofflaw yesternight hard by the county jail. He like an inn was all alight; he had consumed much ale. "I am the well known Sunny Jim," he cried [illegible] between, he bade me dance and sing with him, and gambol on the green. But I was loaded to the guards with water cool and clear, like many highly moral bards I balk at bootleg beer. Warm full of water one's not prone to whoop around and sing; the scofflaw had to [illegible] alone, and [illegible] the Highland Fling. The scofflaw voiced his discontent. "By [illegible]" he said to me "I have no use for any gent who will not dance with me. Our lives are [illegible] and haste away, our days are [illegible] sped, so let's be happy while we may, and paint the village red." I met the scoffaw in the dawn [illegible] by the hoosegow door, and all his jubilance was [illegible] and he was sick and sore. [illegible] head was aching to and fro [illegible] was striped with pink. [illegible] like grief men know [illegible] drink. I [illegible] to [illegible] spring to [illegible] with me [illegible] this [illegible] "Now get you gone," the scofflaw cried "don't [illegible] nor taunt a man whose works are dyed with bitters [illegible]" The scofflaw's [illegible] always brief no sane man [illegible] endorse. The morning finds him steeped in grief, and [illegible] in remorse.
